OUR YOUNG FOLKS.

Peacock Blue.

Ada Louise Adele Depew
Bought her a bonnet of Peacock Blue;
Bought her a bonnet and gown to match,
And a necklace of blue with a golden catch—
Velvet and feathers and ribbons new;
And they all were alike of the Peacock Blue.

Anna Elizabeth Leavitt Lowne
Made her a bonnet of velvet brown—
Made it herself, for this maiden knew
There was no one could make it with taste as true,
Trimmed it with russet to match her gown;
And her gloves were as neat as the best in town.

Proud of her handiwork, frank and free,
Anna Elizabeth called to see
Ada Louise, her friend so true,
Who had purchased the beautiful Peacock Blue.
"Oh! you have come for a walk with me—
And to envy my elegant dress," said she.

Anna Elizabeth felt no more
Proud of the pretty dress she wore—
Said to herself, "There is nothing mine
Of so brilliant a color or half so fine."
But the nest lit e thrush, with its notes so clear,
Need have naught from the peacock so proud to fear.

Pat's Bath.

It was a cheerless day, and rainy. The children were anxious for something to do, because their mother was away, and so were getting both nervous and quarrelsome.

Just then the door opened and in came Dick. He was the tease and torment of the family, but he happened just now to be in good humor. The girls flocked round him.

Where had he been? Who had he seen? Was it ever going to be pleasant and sunshiny again?

"I've been ever to Pat's," said Dick; "and he's fixed up nicely, I can tell you."

"How is his leg? Is it getting well?" asked Pansy.

"He's up, but he can't walk yet. I tell you he's a funny fellow, and just as ready to laugh when he's in pain as to cry. Before he came to this country, he was at service with an Irish Earl, and it's fun to hear his stories about the great house and the great people."

"Let's go over there," suggested Pansy, and every face brightened. They turned to Aunt Ellen. She did not object, so off the little group started.

Pat's room was over the stable. Being a very ingenious man, he had filled it with various little ornaments that gave it a great interest in the eyes of the young people.

Pat's curtains, Pat's pictures and Pat's stove were all admired duly, and then fell silence. Pat himself, with his shock of red hair, bristling beard and mustache, was interesting because he was an invalid, and had his right leg in a cast of plaster.

He had fallen from a ladder a month before, and, as he had few relations able to help him, Mr. Wood, whose coachman he was, had consented to his remaining there. The poor fellow dreaded a hospital above all things, so his two sisters between them nursed him, till now he was nearly well.

Dick broached the subject of "ould Ireland," and Pat's eyes sparkled. Coming out of a smiling reverie, he said:

"Did I iver tell ye how I took a genteel bath for the first time?"

"Oh, Pat! is it a story?" cried Pansy.

"Sure and it is—a story of the ould castle where I was in sarvice before I came over to America.

"You see it was hot I was, afther a hard day's work, and many's the time I'd seen the Arrl in the cool of the avening come out of the little bath-house down by the river as frish and bright as a red herring. Ses he to me, ses he, one time:

"'Pat, would you be liking to take a cowld bath in the bath-house?'

"'Bath-house, is it?' ses I, 'sure ye've been finding the river in.'

"'Not quite,' says the Arrl, laughing, 'it's better than the river, though, and I thought ye might like to refrish yourself.'

"'Thanks,' said I, 'if ye'd be plazed to tell me how.'

"With that he laughed harder, showing all his white, handsome teeth, and he walked with me to the door, took the kay out of his pocket and unlocked it.

"'Do ye see that pig up there?' he asked.

"'Not a sign of a pig,' says I. He meant a wooden handle, and he showed me.

"'That's to hang your clothes on,' says he.

"'Clothes, indade,' says I to mesilf; 'I'd raythur kape 'em on.'

"'Them little plugs down there,' said the Arrl, 'you must pull out for the wather to come in.'

"'Ooh, indade,' says I.

"'An' if it's showering ye wants, take hold of the string youndher.'

"'Showering?' said I, not letting on that I didn't understand, 'showering it is, to be sure.'

"'I'll lock the door and take the kay,' said he, wid a twinkle in his eye; 'so that you'll not be disturbed.'

"'But how'll I git out?' says I.

"'Oh, I'll be back in ten minutes or so.'

"'Very well,' says I, and off he wint.

"So I takes off me shoes and stock-

...ings for the rest, says I, you didn't ...tch this chap taking could for the want ...clothes. So I jest stoops, an' I pulls ...t the plug, an' laid it on the ground.

"Well, the wather came pouring in, ...d it filt mighty nice on me feet, but it ...esn't slow a comin', at all. Faix, by ...time I'd got ready to wash me ...nds, if it wasn't half way up to me ...ees, and there I was in me clothes.

"An it kept pourin' an' pourin', and ...e a fool I'd left the plug on the flure ...d when I wint to find it, faix, it wasn't ...ere. Ooh, and wasn't I in a nice fix, ...n' the wather pourin' over the tub and ...n the floor of the little room, growing ...igher and higher, till it got above me ...nces.

"Pretty soon I sees a handle that ...crewed on, an' faix, I turned it. Ooh, ...y the powers, the wather come splashin' an' roarin' higher and fasther, till there I was floundering nearly up to me middle, an' no help fur it.

"All of a suddint I sees a rope hanging down nearly over me head, and I minds me of the Arrl's showerin'. Thinks to mesilf, that mebbe lifts up something to let the wather down, so I just pulls it, an' would ye believe it, the river got on top of the ruff and comes pouring through till I thought I'd be choked and strangled intirely.

"Didn't I pray to the vargin and all the howly saints, but niver a bit would they hear poor Pat, and the wather drowning me entirely. I could nather open me eyes nor me mouth, an' the wather running into them both, as fast as it could pour.

"'Jest think somebody hollers out—

"'Well, Pat, are ye most through?'

"'Through, is it?' cried I, widout opening me lips; 'through! It's through I'm soaked, besides bein' choked to death. If you don't git me out of this, I'm dead I'll be intirely.'

"'Why, what's the matter, Pat?' said the Arrl, and it's choked he was wid laughing, I could till that, and it made me mad.

"'Matter!' says I. 'Here's the whole river down upon me, an' it's smodtherin' I am intirely. Faix, it ain't fair!'

"'Pull the string,' says he.

"'Och!' says I, 'and didn't I pull the sthring, and git kilt for me pains? Sure it'll be murder, and niver a chance for a prosecution! Let me out!'

"At this, the Arrl laughed till the blood b'iled in me body, but all to once I noticed that the blessed wather was lowerin'; an' prisintly it went fasther and fasther, till I was free Pat once more.

"Then the masther let me out, as wet as a drownded rat, and told me—the—ah, but I'll not call the good Arrl names—that I was welkim to take a bath as often as I liked. So always afther that when the folks wanted to taze me, they'd ask me did I want to take a bath?"

"How I should like to see an Earl!" said Pansy, sighing.

"Sure, an' ye'd see nothing so very grand," said Pat. "He wasn't half the man Masther Wood, yer father, is, for he was one-sided and crooked, and he'd a squint in his eye; but, for all that, he was a kind masther."

"But he lived in a castle," said Pansy, reluctant to give up her visions.

"Och, an auld stone ruin wid scarcely a decent room in it. Ye'd freeze to death, Miss Pansy, in the great rooms, wid a small fire behint the screen. An' all the stairs was stone, and some places the wather ran down the walls almost as fast as it did in the bath."

"Couldn't he repair it?" asked Pansy, Pat shook his head.

"Aye, it took the money to do that, Miss Pansy, and sometimes we'd not see a penny among us for many a week. We raised the pigs an' the stock wid what we growed, and my lady, Miss Cathy, had the chicken money to buy her a new dress once a year or so. I ixpict the father of ye's could buy him out, castle and all, and niver feel it at all."

"And was Lady Cathy very beautiful?" asked Pansy, clinging to a straw as her illusions vanished, one by one.

"Beautiful, do ye say? Ah, she'd the squint in the eyes of the ould Arrl, only twicet as bad, an' she couldn't hold a candle to you, Miss Pansy, or any of yer sisters. Beautiful!" and Pat leaned back in his chair and laughed, while Pansy went home more thoughtful than usual, because her idea of an Earl and an Earl's daughter had not been realized.—Youth's Companion.

THE LITTLE CLIMBERS.

BY MRS. S. M. B. PIATT.

Lost children always climb, Are you quite sure
Their slight feet wander upward for the lure
Of any bloom or berries satin-bright,
Or any butterfly that will not light?

Ah! but, my friend, what if some one should say,
Perhaps in this most sweet, most pious way,
These helpless things in their sad wonder try,
All unaware, somehow to find the sky?

I only know that somewhere I have read
How, through dark doors, men bring the little dead
Back to the mother's arms, oh, many a time,
And softly say: "The child had tried to climb."

THERE is no tide perceptible in the Mississippi river after you have passed up about thirty miles from its mouth, and the tide only rises from one and a-half to two feet at Balize. The number of tributaries (the Ohio, Missouri, and so on) which help to flood the Mississippi and swell its volume of water, gives it that downward current which overcomes every resisting influence, even the tidal.

CATGUT, it is stated, was used in the earlier watches in place of chains, the latter, it would seem, being first attached to such mechanisms in the golden egg or acorn-shaped watches of Hans Johns, of Konigsberg. Some of the maker's timekeepers had small wheel-lock pistols to serve as an alarm, an addition that would go far to upset the equable temperament and delicate susceptibilities of a modern chronometer.

COL. IRONSIDES, who lived in India early in this century, relates that he met in his travels an old white-haired man who with one leap sprung over the back of an enormous elephant flanked by six camels of the largest breed. A curious French work, published in Paris in 1714 entitled "The Tracts Toward the History of Wonders Performed at Fairs," mentioned an Englishman who, at the fair of St. Germain in 1724, leaped over forty people without touching one of them.

IN 1855 Sir Henry Rawlinson carried with him to England many relics of ancient Babylon, all of which are now in the British Museum. The town of Zithah, with 7,000 inhabitants, is now considered the modern representative of ancient Babylon. As for Thebes, the ruins comprise nine townships. Recent excavations have brought to light these constructions of the eleventh dynasty. The Nile flows through the midst of the ancient city. It is now inhabited by a few Arab families. Tyre existed, amid all its destructive experiences, until A. D. 1516, when the conquest of Selim together with the newly discovered route to Asia by the Cape of Good Hope, put an end to its wealth and commerce. Among its ruins from 3,000 to 4,000 inhabitants now dwell and earn a livelihood by exporting tobacco, cotton, wool and wood. Nineveh was destroyed before about 605 B. C., and the slabs and statues found there show the effects of intense heat. The excavations exhibit many bas-reliefs representing war and hunting. The discoveries of Layard and others in the neighborhood of Mosul, the supposed site of Nineveh, since 1839, have in a manner disinterred and re-peopled a city which, for centuries, had seemed to be blotted from the map of the earth.

Pete's Icicles.

Pete was a Kansas immigrant from the South, in which climate he had never seen weather sufficiently cold to form an icicle. The farmer he hired out to gave Pete instructions one day to go to the wood-shed and tell Jake, a Northern "nig," to remove the icicles from the barn. The word icicles staggered Pete. However, he kept muttering the sentence, "De eye sycles in de barn," until, when he reached the woodshed, the sentence was so inextricably mixed that he stood for a few moments looking at Jake, expecting he might anticipate the message and relieve the old man of his difficulty. Finding no relief in Jake's stare of inquiry he launched out with, "Look a hyar, you Jake, de mass'r tole me to tole you, dat you wor fo—to—ar—to remove de barnacles in de ice; you hyar?" Jake dropped his ax, and, scratching his woolly pate, queried, "De whaticles in de whar?" "Didn't I tole yer as plain as your underlip, de bicycles from the yarn?" "You said nuffin o' de kine; you said de 'obstacles in de ice house." "I tell you, nigger, wot I tole you was de 'housicals from de barnacles.'" "Look a hyar, you Southern galoot, you is a whimsical and nonsensical fool, an' you is gittin' too quizzical to suit dis chile. I know wot you's a divin' at; de mass'r tole you to tole me to chop de wood darned quick, an' dat's wot I'm a doin' an' don't you forget it." "Well, Jake, I knew it wor somefin like dat, but I guess my soul if I could jist git de exact vocabulary."

Noted Men Who Married Women Older than Themselves.

Mohammed's wife was twenty years older than her husband, and it is much to the credit of the latter that he honored her to the last. He ascribed much of his success to her assistance and influence. John Howard, the philanthropist, married out of gratitude a woman who was equally his senior. She died in a few years, however, and his second union was one of love. It was, however, also dissolved by the death of his wife, and then he devoted himself to philanthropy. Napoleon's first wife, Josephine, was his senior by six years, being 30 at the time of their marriage, while he was 25. It would have been well for him had he valued her conjugal love, whose violation was the beginning of his ruin. Aaron Burr also married a widow, who, like Josephine, had two children. Mrs. Burr was ten years older than her husband, but the union was very harmonious. She probably allowed him that large liberty with the fair sex to which he had been accustomed, and thus avoided domestic quarrels. John Wilkes, the famous London agitator of the last century, married a lady who was ten years his senior, but she was not willing to overlook his irregularities, and hence obtained a divorce.

Johnson, the lexicographer, married the Widow Porter, who had a small property. He was acquainted with the family before the death of her husband, and this helped in the matter of courtship. Mrs. Porter was 48, while her husband was only 21 at the time of the wedding. The parties started horseback for the place where the ceremony was to be performed, and Johnson thus described the journey to Boswell: "Sir, she has got into her head from old romances that a woman of spirit should use her lover like a dog. At first she told me I rode too fast and she could not keep up with me, but when I slacked my pace she passed me and complained that I lagged. I was not to be made the slave of caprice, and therefore pushed on till I was out of sight. When she got to the destination I observed that she was in tears." Johnson always mourned the loss of his wife, and though he was only 43 at the time of her death he never married again. How often in his subsequent writings he refers to his lost companion in the most affectionate manner.

When only 18 Shakspeare was married to Annie Hathaway, whose age was 25. Six months from the wedding day the first son was born to this ill-mated pair. The husband and father had no means of supporting a family, and when the latter had increased to the number of a son and two daughters he fled to London. The deserted wife supported her children as best she could, and twenty years afterward her husband returned, and by his subsequent conduct strove to atone for his early error.

The Turkish woman is marriageable at the age of nine years, and by the Turkish law, at that age, if married, she is competent to manage her property and dispose of one-third of her fortune. The law allows her to abandon her husband's house for just cause, and will protect her in so doing. She can not be compelled to labor for the support of her husband. On the contrary, he is compelled to support her, and it is a penal offense to insult or ill-treat her. On an accusation of infidelity her oath is accepted as equally good with his and collateral proof must be obtained. Should he not furnish her with funds she is authorized to borrow in his name, and even to sell his property. After marriage she has absolute control of her own property, which he can not touch.

Some reasons for tree planting worth repeating; They modify the temperature, promoting coolness in summer and warmth in winter. They exhale oxygen and absorb deleterous gasses, thereby conferring great benefits on unhealthy or overcrowded districts. By their roots they purify the soil below as well as the atmosphere above by their leaves. Their individual influence is surprisingly great. It has been estimated that a good-sized elm tree would produce about 700,000 leaves, equal to about 200,000 square feet of surface.

A LADY writes: I have often noticed that most newspaper reporters are young men. I never hear them spoken of when they become aged. The question that troubles me is, what becomes of them?" OUR TAXES.

We find we were mistaken in our estimate of the amount of tax that would probably be levied this Fall by the Board of Supervisors. Instead of $2 50 being enough, it may be that $3 will not be sufficient, but no conclusion can be arrived at until the Board of Equalization get through with the assessment roll. The Supervisors are now sitting as a board of Equalization, probably the most unpleasant portion of their public duties, and it matters not how honestly and conscienciously they may act in the matters brought to their attention, curses and mutterings are heard on every side. If they raise an assessment they are cursed by the victim, and if they do not, the general public will find fault, so it matters but little to them which side of the fence they are on—there is a bull on each side to make it lively for them. Every taxpayer and every intelligent man in the county is well aware of the fact that the assessment roll last year was ridiculously low; but this year it is nearer the mark, although injustice may have been done, unintentionally, to both the taxpayer and the county. The Board has heard some applications for a reduction, but such have not been very numerous during the first two weeks of their session, but there may be many before they close business. When the Assessor and Tax Collector are around it might be pleasant to be able to say, "Blessed be nothing!" but we venture the assertion there is no property in this county listed on our assessment roll—from a $10 valuation to a $1,000,000, that could be bought for double or treble the assessed valuation at private sale; and as the Constitution requires all property to be taxed at a cash valuation, all should succumb to the inevitable and pay their just proportion of governmental expenses—expenses that must accrue, and be paid by the property holders; and the greater the amount of property held by an individual or corporation, the greater amount of protection do they require, and the lesser amount do they wish to pay toward securing that protection—the burdens of carrying on the government falling to the small taxpayer. If our taxpayers this year would work clear up into the collar and pay their taxes promptly, the county could be put on a sound financial basis, and next year our county taxes would be much lighter, and more easily paid. Our Supervisors are disposed to equalize the assessment roll in as just a way as they can, and be just to the people of the county, as well as to the individual or corporation.

SURVIVORS OF STEVENSON'S REGIMENT.—Francis D. Clark, formerly of Company D, of Colonel Stevenson's Regiment of New York Volunteers, has issued a request to all surviving members of that command to send their names and addresses to him, together with the names of such others of the old regiment as are positively known to be living, with their present residence; also the names of any comrades who died during the past five years. He desires to publish a full and correct record of the old regiment, hence his request. His address is No. 38 Courtland street, New York.

There is a general commendation of the course pursued in regard to Guiteau. What he would like would be that newspaper reporters should have access to him, that his opinions and doings should be spread abroad and that he should be allowed to feed his love of notoriety, by gloating over the papers daily. Instead of this, no information is allowed to reach him.

The Yorktown Centennial Commission has formally accepted the model of the proposed monument. It will cost $100,000. Secretary Lincoln, in charge of the appropriation, will be requested to direct the work to be begun at once.

It is further ordered, that all the Creditors of said debtor be and appear before the Honorable R. M. Briggs, Judge of the Superior Court of the said County of Mono, in open Court, at the Court Room of said Court, in the said County of Mono, on the 22d day of August, 1881, at 10 o'clock A. M. of that day, to prove their debts and choose one or more assignees of the estate of said debtor.

It is further ordered, that the order be published in the BRIDGEPORT CHRONICLE-UNION, a newspaper of general circulation, published in the County of Mono, as often as the said paper is published, before the said day set for meeting of Creditors.

MONO BANKS.

We have noticed a two line item in our exchanges, that the San Luis Obispo Bank had lost a suit in the Superior Court of that county, on the grounds that the Bank had neglected to, or did not, make its regular semi-annual statement of its affairs, as required by State law. It seems rather hard that one should lose what is his due on such a trivial ground of defense, but again, it would be supposed that the managers of a banking institution in a county like San Luis Obispo would be more careful, and comply with our State laws in relation to their business, even if those laws are unfavorable to their interests, for surely a non-compliance with their provisions cannot help the matter. In this connection we can say a good word for our Mono banks, which are located in Bodie. They are the Mono County Bank and the Bodie Bank, both well conducted and safe institutions—as safe as any in the State. The Mono County Bank is under the management of Howard Hastings, a gentleman who has been in the banking business from boyhood, and is consequently as well versed in it as any man in the State.

The Bodie Bank is under the management of George H. Winterburn, a thoro going business man, and one who is well acquainted with the financial standing of those inclined to deal with the banks.

That these banks have been well managed is evidenced by the records of our Courts, which show that neither has been obliged to go before the Superior Courts of our county to enforce the collection of debts. This we consider the best of proof that the Banks of this county have been, and are, carefully managed, and are fully worthy the confidence the people of this county have reposed in them. It would be well for the San Luis Obispo County Bank to take a few lessons in banking from Mono county. We do not consider a bank well managed when it is continually in Court trying to enforce the collection of its bad debts—and one can scarcly pick up a paper published in any county in the State that can boast of a Bank that does not contain some evidence that its county Bank is in its Courts trying to collect bad debts—a good sign, we consider, of poor management. We may conclude by saying that there is probably no Bank outside of San Francisco or Sacramento that does a larger or more profitable business than the two Bodie Banks mentioned above.

The Governors of twenty States have indorsed the proposition for a national celebration in honor of the President's escape from the hands of the assassin.

The Plumas National thinks there should be a gathering of old Californians in Quincy in 1882, and wants to start the ball rolling now which will result in a grand reunion of the Pioneers.

JOB PRINTING.—Job printing of the finest description will be furnished at this office at Sacramento prices.

LOCAL INTELLIGENCE.

BOARD OF EQUALIZATION.—This Board has this week made some increase in a few assessments, the most notable one being in the case of the Standard Company, whose mining property at Bodie was assessed at $1,000,000. The Board was not satisfied with the assessment and have advanced it to $2,000,000. That the mine is worth double even this last amount, there is scarcely a doubt, saying nothing about improvements. As the assessment is much larger than the Company think the property ought to be listed at there will probably be a lawsuit, the Standard Co. claiming, we believe, that the mine has no fixed value; it may be rich to-day, and peter out to-morrow. This is a question that will be an important one to Mono county as the mines become paying property, and it may be as well to have the matter settled at once—whether a mine can only be taxed for the improvements on the surface. The Standard is an enormously rich mine, and it could not be bought of its owners for less than a great many million dollars, as it pays nearly a million dollars in dividends yearly, and the owners, who are mostly non-residents of our county, should not object to paying on an assessment that is not high, when the productiveness of the property is taken into consideration in comparison with property in the county that is really unproductive in a very great measure—we are now speaking of the original $1,000,000 assessment—the tax on which would be about $30,000—a sum that would never be missed by the Company which through its great ramifications, requires more protection from the county than any other single corporation in our county. We hope a fair understanding can be arrived at between the Company and Board of Equalization without resorting to the Courts, and that whatever understanding, or agreement, is arrived at, it will be a precedent for the future assessments of the Standard property.

PERSONAL.—Next week, Judge M. P. Wiggin goes to Alpine to preside over the Superior Court, after which he will proceed direct to San Francisco, where, on the first Monday in August, he is to hear the arguments in the case of Miller vs. Butterfield, which was tried here last month. The Judge will not return to Mono till September, having very important private business to attend to at the Bay.

Paul W. Bennett came down from Bodie to-day; and, also, Thos. P. Ryan and wife. Mrs. Ryan, who is out of health, expects to leave for San Francisco on Monday.

The family of Register Goodall, of the Land Office, came down on Wednesday and stopped at the Allen House. Mr. Goodall has been occupying his mind and exercising his limbs in prospecting the Sweetwater mines.

NEW TESTAMENT—REVISED EDITION.—We have received from The Henry Bill Publishing Co., of Norwich, Conn., a copy of this work, which has been so much talked of, written about, thought of, and scoffed at. These publishers have produced a very fine edition, being printed with clear, bold, new type on fine paper, and gilt edged and bound in black morocco. It is difficult for us to say, how many pleasant hours are in store for us in its perusal—but a great many, no doubt. Everybody should have a copy of this new production of the Revision Commission and The Henry Bill Publishing Co. as a curiosity, if not for general utility.

A PICNIC.—With the exception of ourselves, all the young, unmarried folks in town left here this morning for Buckeye Canon, to picnic. Everything in the shape of a stylish turnout was brought into requisition; but we think they would have enjoyed the trip much better had they all bundled into one big conveyance—but, then, it is none of our funeral, is it?

SHOT.—Rover, the notorious jail dog, was shot to death yesterday morning by one of our citizens, and was formally buried by the prisoners. Rover has lately been too fond of getting up fights with his kind, and that habit was the immediate cause of his sudden taking off.

GOOD CROPS.—Our Antelope Valley farmers have splendid crops this year, and are supplying the Bodie market with their produce. Their good fortune may be attributed to their subscribing to the CHRONICLE-UNION, which has given them valuable information about husbandry.

INDEPENDENT.—Yesterday the Wedertz and Donnel families went to the West Walker on a picnic excursion, to be gone several days—until the "staff of life" gives out.

NEW GOODS.—Reason Barnes' mountain clippers arrived here on Thursday from Carson with new goods for Hays Bros., and L. E. Wedertz. Give them a call.

PLEASANT.—The weather this week has been pleasant—not so much wind as during previous weeks, when the comet was whisking its tail over our valley.

VERY DIM.—The comet is getting away from us at a very lively rate and its presence can scarcely be discerned. Now let's keep a good lookout for the next one.

NOTARY.—Governer Perkins has appointed Paul W. Bennett, of Bodie, a Notary Public.

BUSY.—Sheriff Showers and his deputies have been busy this week serving attachments on some Bodie people. The well-known dry goods house of Silas B. Smith was closed by the Sheriff on last Saturday, and an attachment was put on the store of J. H. Page on Monday evening. The friends of both gentlemen, who are old and enterprising citizens of Bodie, will regret that their business affairs are under a cloud. It is hoped that Mr. Page will arrange to go on, as the attachment is on an old judgment on a partnership that he thought had been settled. Mr. Smith will probably be thrown into involuntary insolvency.

Kangaroo tail soup is now canned in Australia and exported in great quantities.—Ex.

This soup must have found its way to Bodie—judging from the way people have "jumped" that town without paying their debts.

The recent fire on Dr. Glenn's ranch burnt over four miles and destroyed 3000 acres of grain, four miles of fence, six head of mules, one header and 18 wagons. It was started by some small boys who kindled a fire in an old stove that stood outside of an unoccupied cabin.

HOUSE AND FARM.

Training Horses.

Forty-six years ago David Lewis, then a handsome, round-headed Welshman, was driving from Utica, Oneida county, to Hamilton College, having a load of lads returning after a spring vacation to their studies. As he neared Middle settlement attention was called to a farmer maltreating a colt which could not and would not keep up in his work with an older horse harnessed beside it. David, displeased at the unreasonable farmer, murmured "Ta-ra-lural" (but did not swear), and stopped for the farmer to come to the roadside, and the two commenced talking in Welsh. We college boys had no Welsh professor, and were ignorant of the language. The tounges of David and his countryman had a short spat. As we started on our way I asked for a translation of the Welsh dialogue. Says David: "The man asked me to tell him how to break his colt, and I told him to go in the house and break himself." No man can master a colt properly who cannot control himself. There is no mystery in education. The whole method is according to law. Beware and punishments underlie just government. Beware of an improper punishment of a colt as you would of a human being; for you must command respect if you would educate either. Never trifle nor deceive. When you must draw the whip to compel attention, remember to reward obedience with sugar, or some pleasing gift. First make your colt your friend, and then educate without impatience or severity. Condescend to talk to your horse, and be clear in your language, for he can hear and is glad to be coolly and intelligently directed. "Go on! Steady! Whoa!" are three magic words which should be used to start, to moderate, or to stop the movements of a colt. Repeat them clearly, as you have occasions to use them, for just what they mean, and the colt will soon obey them, and be proud of his knowledge. Be at all times considerate, kind, fair and firm, remembering there is a limit to every sensitive organization. It does no harm to tire a colt, but never exhaust one. Groom well after work, rather than before. If you hate a colt, let some one else educate him. —Brentano's Monthly.

If a colt is never allowed to get an advantage, it will never know that it possesses a power that man cannot control, and if made familiar with strange objects, it will not be skittish and nervous. If a horse is made accustomed from his early days to have objects hit him on his heels, back or hip, he will pay no attention to the giving way of a harness, or a wagon running against him at an unexpected moment.

Never go to bed in a room where there is a kerosene lamp burning, "turned down low." If the flame in a lamp chimney does not cause enough draught to insure perfect combustion, the carbon and carbonic acid gas thrown off will cause headache, if nothing worse. If a little light is needed in a bed-chamber, use a prepared taper, candle, or wick floating in animal or vegetable oil; but the turned-down kerosene lamp is always a menace to health and life.

A farmer says: "Four years ago my barn was fearfully infested with rats. They were so numerous that I had fear of my whole crop being destroyed by them after it was housed; but having two acres of wild pepper-mint that grew in a field of wheat, cut and bound with the wheat, it drove the rats from my premises. I have not been troubled with them since, while my neighbors have any quantity of them."

A Virginian has patented a cattle-shed for use as temporary shelter in open fields or pastures. The roof of this shed is pivoted to an upright in connection with a kind of windmill so that the shed is turned a the direction of the wind is changed, thus shielding the inmates from direct exposure to the storm.

Whipped Potatoes.—Whipped boiled potatoes to creamy lightness with a fork; beat in butter, milk, pepper and salt; at last, the frothed white of an egg; toss irregularly upon a dish, set in the oven two minutes to reheat, but do not let it color.

No man should do more work of muscles or of brain in a day than he can perfectly recover from the fatigue of in a good night's rest. Up to that point exercise is good; beyond are waste of life, exhaustion, and decay. When hunger calls for food and fatigue demands rest, we are in the natural order, and keep the balance of life. When we take stimulants to spur our jaded nerves or excite an appetite, we are wasting life.

What greater thing is there for two human souls than to feel that they are joined for life—to strengthen each other in all labor, to rest on each other in all sorrow, to minister to each other in all pain, to be one with each other in silent, unspeakable memories at the moment of the last parting.
